Treasury Wine Estates Vintrepreneur named in 2013 WME Leaders List

More than 100 nominations and 1500 public votes cast

Olivia Tyler, Treasury Wine Estates Group Corporate Social Responsibility Manager has been named as a corporate sustainability leader in this year's WME Leaders List. WME Magazine is a leading environment business magazine that polls environmental professionals annually to select leaders who have made outstanding personal contributions towards sustainable outcomes. Announced late yesterday, the List recognises and honours individuals who have provided long-term environment leadership in industry, the environmental services sector, and government and non-government organisations.

Olivia is a firm believer that business can make a significant difference in creating a more sustainable world. Contributing to her inclusion on the list is the instrumental role she has played in formulating and executing TWE's sustainability strategy and community investment program – Being an Agent of Change – which aims to deliver over $1 million of value to the community through volunteering, grants and donations.

Speaking about her recognition as a leader, Olivia said:

"I am delighted to be named on the WME Leaders List. As a corporate social responsibility practitioner for TWE, I have a great opportunity to strengthen the connection between environment and social sustainability, and our strategic, commercial and disclosure priorities."

"Driving sustainable outcomes on the inside of a global organisation like TWE can take many forms – so much is possible. I am fortunate to have a great team to work with, and the commitment of TWE's Board and Executive team."

To determine the 2013 WME Leaders, public nominees were assessed by an expert panel to create a shortlist of up to 10 people for each of the five categories. In each category, one winner was chosen by the judging panel and one by public vote, with 1500 votes cast this year.

Treasury Wine Estates CEO, David Dearie commented:

"I would like to congratulate Olivia for being recognised for her commitment to corporate sustainability. She has been a true 'Agent of Change' in driving our environmental sustainability strategy and community investment program. Thanks to Olivia and her team's efforts, we will continue to make significant progress toward our Corporate Social Responsibility goals."
